Product information

All Metro bezels are manufactured from stainless steel. This material offers full protection against corrosion in most environments. When placed in a more aggressive environment (salty environment in coastal areas), extra protection is recommended.

Electrolytic polishing offers the right solution for this. A short explanation : most stainless steel alloys contain iron, chromium and nickel. These last two elements form a protective chrome oxide skin and provide corrosion resistance. Electrolytic polishing (electrical current and chemicals) causes impurities and metal particles to dissolve. This makes the surface smoother and also increases the percentage of chromium and nickel.

The positive effects of this process are:

1. the smooth surface is less affected over time,
2. the impurities are removed and the stainless steel is nobler,
3. the increased presence of chromium and nickel provides a thicker and denser protective chrome oxide skin (up to factor 10!).

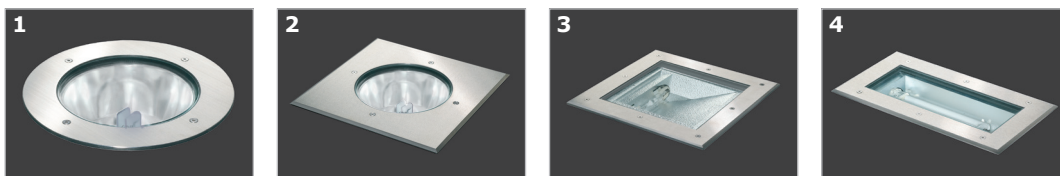

All Metro bezels are available in this electrolytic polished finish. This treatment however generates a supplementary cost, a supplement per bezel and a one-time cost per order.

In the below table article codes and gross prices for the above mentioned costs are listed. These codes and prices are valid for the Metro luminaires with and without recessed housing!
